

*Can't you see why I'm trying today
What my mind sees, but my lips won't say
There's always something different for us to try
I know we'll be together until we die*

*Life is hard, but we'll pass the test
Don't listen to what they say
Except only the truth and pray for the best
Love will save the day*

*My life was yours and I expected the same
For you, I would give it away
I only wanted you to believe in yourself, and of course, in me*

*Can't we try to work it out
Why can't we see instead of shout
I know you love me
It's so obvious, why can't you see.*

Life is just one big game with a lot of players. Your Kings & Queens, Knights & Rooks and then there is the Pawns, the ones who do all the dirty work or whatever it takes to survive the game.

The weak ones will always go first, if not by their own dagger, a more equipped player is always willing to lend a hand. The rest of the pawns strive by killing each other or sacrificing themselves for the sake of the game. Some pawns make it to the back line, but The King & His Court will always have control and make the rules to stay. Protected by pawns is a good defense, but there is no protection from fate.

The game is not the richest wins, although protection can cost a pretty penny. It's survival by any means necessary. So if you understand the game, increase your level and take control. Step on whoever's back has stairs embedded and leap for the back line.
